"I Am Not Responsible for Leone's Death," Declared Harvard Man Accused of Murder

MUENTER DENIED GUILT

Erich Muenter, the Harvard instructor, whom the Cambridge police accuse of murdering his wife by means of slow poisoning.

Elements in Mystery

Mrs. Erich Muenter, wife of Harvard professor, dies in Cambridge, April 16.
Physicians refuse attendance because she was treated by Christian Scientists.
Autopsy on body reveals arsenic in stomach.
Husband takes wife's body to Chicago for burial.
Cambridge police, unable to locate him, call on Chicago police for his arrest on murder charge.
Muenter disappears day after wife's funeral and has been missing since April 20.
Friends say he acted as though temporarily unsound in mind.

Instructor Charged With Poisoning His Wife Told Brother-in-Law He Had Signed Statement from Dead Woman Acquitting Him of Responsibility—No Warrant for Arrest.

"I am not responsible for Leone's death. Before she died she gave me a signed statement to that effect."

This was the declaration made by Erich Muenter, the Harvard instructor who is sought by the Cambridge police on a charge of poisoning his wife, to her brothers, Walter and Eugene Krembs, in Chicago, according to leased wire dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN from that city.

It also developed in Chicago, through statements by the dead woman's relatives, that Muenter had a mania for giving drugs to human beings to watch their effect. Muenter was formerly a student at the Midway College in Chicago, and the police of that city are now searching the University of Chicago for him, thinking that he may be in hiding there.

Walter Krembs, Muenter's brother-in-law, says that the missing man borrowed $150 of him just before he disappeared. He told Krembs that he wanted the money to pay the fee for cremating his wife's body. Bertha Muenter, a sister, who is a teacher at the Hendricks School, has left Chicago very suddenly and is believed to be on her way to Boston.

JUDGE REFUSES WARRANT.

On the ground that there had not been sufficient evidence presented, Judge Almy, in the Cambridge District Court to-day, refused to grant a warrant for Muenter's arrest on the charge of murder. He said that he wanted additional information on several points, and Medical Examiner Swan and Chief of Detectives Hurley believe that they will be able to satisfy him during the day so that the warrant will be issued.

Dr. Swan, Chief Hurley and Judge Almy were together for almost half an hour to-day, and the evidence so far collected by the police was gone over carefully. The judge refused to say on what points he desired further evidence.

SEEK MISSING STUDENT.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Chief Hurley and Judge Almy held another conference, District Attorney George A. Sanderson being present. While they were talking a telephone message was received from Inspector Deehan and both Mr. Sanderson and Chief Hurley left at once.

The police are hunting for F. W. Bryant, a student who roomed in the Muenter's house. The house is closed and Bryant has not been seen about the college to-day.

The police have been unable to find that Muenter boght any arsenic in Cambridge. Inspector Hurley said to-day:

"A thorough canvass has been made of the drug stores of Cambridge and we have been unable to learn that Muenter purchased arsenic in any of them. I believe that, if he had arsenic, he secured it from the college."

POLICE SEEK MUENTER.

The police of every city in the United States are now searching for Muenter.

Chief Frederick B. Pullen of the Cambridge police believes that Muenter, who left for Chicago with his wife's body on April 17, has returned to Boston and is now hiding in or near this city, intending to take a steamer for Europe. The police of Boston are watching the wharves and railroad stations and using every means in their power to apprehend the missing man.

Chief Pullen has received information that Muenter was seen near Harvard University last Thursday.

"A man whose name I do not care to make public at present," said the chief, "has told me that he saw Muenter in Cambridge this week. If he is not mis-

TO SHOOT LOOTERS

Depredations Reported to Have Been Renewed in Various Districts.

Cold Rain Again Causes Misery in the Refugee Camps.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—Colonel Frank Maus of the Twenty-third United States Infantry, who has charge of the third military district of the city, with headquarters in Portsmouth square, is authority ofr the statement that looting has recommenced in Chinatown, and in the ruins of pawnshops along Kearney street. Much of this work, he says, is being done by sightseers. Already bushels of bronzes, brasses and partly melted jewelry have been acrried away.

Colonel Maus announces that he will detail a special company to patrol the district, and warns depredatory sightseers that the new patrol will be instructed to shoot looters.

There is great distress in the camps of the homeless in Golden Gate Park, the Presidio and in and around Oakland, caused by a great wind and rain storm that swept the ruined city and the surrounding country during the night.

The rain soaked through tents and roughly constructed shelters, drenching the inmates and the cold winds chilled them to the bone.

DR. CHASE AGAIN TO FACE DEATH PROBE

LYNN, April 28.—Judge John W. Berry of the Lynn Police Court has set Thursday, May 3, for the continued hearing of the inquest which he has been conducting into the death of Mrs. Jennie P. Chase, wife of Dr. Horace Chase of Swampscott. Mrs. Chase died last September under mysterious circumstances. District Attorney W. Scott Peters has had the hearing adjourned from time to time to procure new evidence.

The death of Samuel P. Harris, chief of police of Swampscott, was a severe blow to the district attorney's labors as Harris had accumulated much evidence since the inquest was postponed. At the inquest next week it is expected the district attorney will present all of the evidence he has. Dr. Chase, husband of the dead woman, will be recalled to the stand as well as Professor W. F. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School, who told at the last hearing of finding arsenic in the stomach of the dead woman in quantity sufficient to cause death. Servants of the family will be called to testify about the arsenic which it is said was always kept in the house as rat poison. The hearing was adjourned January 3 while Professor Whitney was on the stand.

FOES OF CIVIC LIGHTING PLAN "BLIND" TOUR

How to view the Western municipal lighting plants without going to Detroit or Chicago is a problem that is puzzling the members of the city council committee on public lighting.

The committee of fifteen—of whom twelve or thirteen have already declared themselves as being opposed to allowing the people of Boston to vote on the question of municipal ownership of their lighting plant—is planning a "tour of investigation" throughout the country, to gather material upon which to report as to the advisability or inadvisability of city ownership in Boston. It is desired that the trip shall be of some extent, through a country in which a summer vacation may be pleasantly spent, and the members would like to include the Great Lages region in their itinerary.

A considerable obstacle in the way of this is that municipal ownership in Detroit has saved that city upward of a million dollars, while Chicago, with only the right to manufacture its own light, and no right to sell it for commercial purposes, has also made a brilliant record. It is not desired to visit such cities, and the planning of the trip so as not to include these cities is likely to give the itinerary-makers a considerable amount of trouble.

The committee will give a public hearing next Wednesday at the Common Council Chamber, at which they announce that "all persons desiring to present their views will be heard."

RAYMONDS REJOICE AT HACKETT CASE PROBE

ELSIE RAYMOND'S HUSBAND, CALLED AS WITNESS, SAYS THEY WANT SUSPENSE ENDED.

Special to the Boston American.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 28.—Levi L. Hackett, father of Mattie Hackett, the girl who was murdered at Readfield last August, was examined before the Grand Jury this forenoon. His testimony mainly covered times and places of incidents connected with the crime.

Bertrand Raymond, husband of Elsie Rayomnd, who was under police surveillance for some time after the murder, was in court and will be called during the day. It is expected that the case will be finished by night.

The summoning of Raymond, and not his wife, was a surprise to all. It has been generally believed that she would be called in any case, as the action of the police led to the belief that she knew something of how the pretty Readfield girl met her death.

Raymond Welcomes Inquiry.

Bertrand Raymond was interviewed by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter at the courthouse to-day. "My wife and myself are glad that the Grand Jury is investigating the murder of Miss Hackett," he said, "for we both believe that if the truth is brought out my wife will be removed from all suspicion.

"Whether my wife is indicted for this crime or not, we know that she will be vindicated. This cloud of uncertainty and doubt that has hovered about Elsie since last Fall has been hard to bear."

Tramp Johnson Also Called.

Another move of the State was to summon Alfred Johnson, the tramp, who after the murder was arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the crime. He was held in the Kennebec jail for two months, but was finally released, there being no evidence against him. Johnson was not present at the trial yesterday, being in Caribou, but it was given out by the State that he would testify before the Grand Jury adjourned. It was not indicated what points he would be depended upon to substantiate.

Detective Martin of Boston, who took part in the examination of the Raymond girl, who said she had heard a whispered conversation relating to the murder while she was visiting in Readfield, was the first witness on the list, but the State will not call him until the end.

Should a true bill be returned an arrest will be ordered immediately by High Sheriff Ham and the person indicted will be confined in the county jail in this city until next October, when the next session of the Supreme Court occurs.

GRAND JURY INDICTS N. Y. INSURANCE MAN

NEW YORK, April 28.—William A. Brewer, Jr., formerly president of the Washington Life Insurance Company, was yesterday indicted by the grand jury for perjury, on the ground that his report to the State superintendent of insurance in 1903 made it appear that the company had a surplus of about $200,000, when there was really a deficit of $80,000.

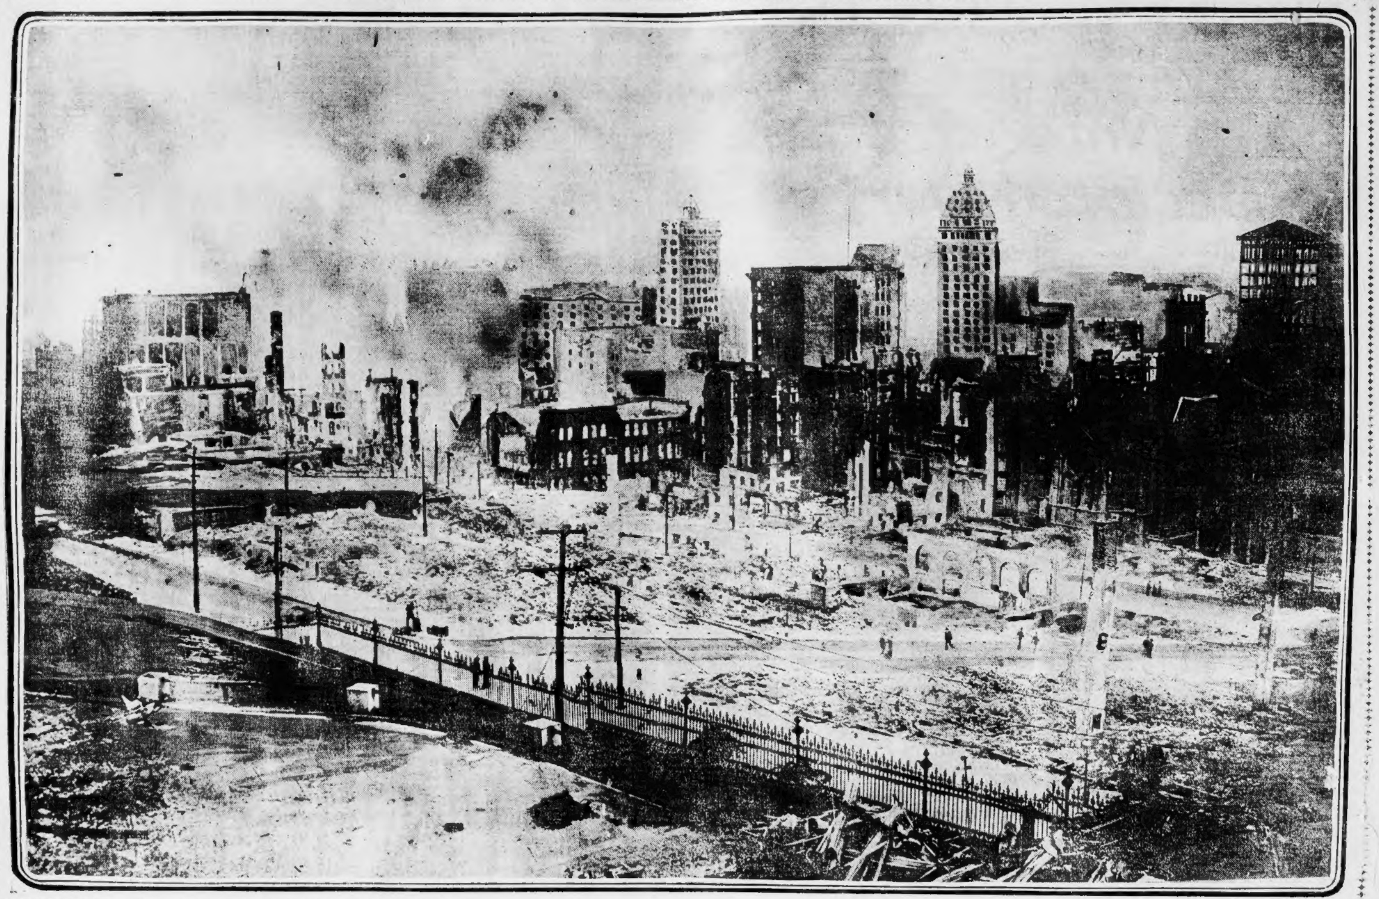
COLD RAIN BRINGS MISERY TO FRISCO REFUGEES



HOW THE FLAMES SWEPT THE CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO AROUND NOB HILL

This view was photographed from the grounds of the Mark Hopkins Art Institute, and shows how complete was the devastation around Nob Hill. In the foreground are several city blocks levelled to the ground, with only a chimney or a pillar standing here and there to show where houses and retail stores once stood. In the distance loom the wrecks of the great office buildings along Market street. The tower of the Call building.

There was the least suffering in the Presidio camp, where the refugees had been provided with army tents, and where drains had been dug through the camp to carry off the water. "Capitalists are not in the least dismayed or disheartened," said James D. Phelan, chairman of the finance committee. "Before the earthquake I had been asked by capitalists to build a large hotel on the site of the Phelan building at Market and O'Farrell streets.

"Since the disaster the proposition has been repeated and urged. This shows there is no lack of faith in the future of the city."

No More Cattle Wanted.

Major-General Greely has issued a notice to the public generally that beef cattle cannot be handled as donations in San Francisco, and that their utility elsewhere is exceedingly small. The cattle en route will be cared for, it is stated, but future shipments should be discouraged.

The first arrest has been made for alleged reckless shooting by a member of the State militia. Ernest Wilder, a National Guard sentry, fired at something in the dark. He was captured and disarmed by Captain R. F. Ryttenhouse of the United States Marine Corps, in command of the district in which the shooting occurred.

Finance Relief Statement.

The finance committee has given out the following recapitulation of the subscription fund:

Total out-of-town subscription, $4,617,488.43.

Local subscriptions, $213,950.00.

Total, $4,831,438.43.

Subscriptions promised but not signed, $590,000.

HEIR TO SUGAR KING BORN ON SIDEWALK

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 28.—The most notable incident among the many which have marked the levelling influence of the earthquake and conflagration occurred three days ago, when a boy was born on the sidewalk in front of his Pacific avenue home to Rudolph Spreckles, son of the president of the sugar trust. Both mother and child are doing well.

MORAN WANTS POLICE STATION THEFTS PROBED

District Attorney John B. Moran to-day sent a letter to the police commissioners calling their attention to alleged whose-sale thefts going on in the sixteen police stations of the city, both of prisoners' property and also the officers' belongings.

The action was caused by the husband of a woman entering complaint with Mr. Moran to the effect that while at the Hanover street station she had lost a silk waist and skirt.

John E. Flynn and Jeremiah Driscoll of the Hanover street station and John H. Sweeney of the Lagrange street station were closeted with Mr. Moran this forenoon. They told of losing their own property and of the property of several prisoners being taken. A case was cited at the Hanover street station where some men lost their watches. One of the officers, who was formerly at the East Dedham street station, told of thefts while he was there.

HARVARD INSTRUCTOR MISSING: WIFE POISONED

Police Charge Erich Muenter With Murder. Startling Circumstances of Woman's Death.

taken I believe Muenter is still here or nearby."

TOOK BODY TO CHICAGO.

As told exclusively in the AMERICAN yesterday, Muenter went to Chicago with the body of his wife the day after her death, taking his two daughters, one of whom was born ten days previous to Mrs. Muenter's death. He attended the funeral of his wife and on April 2 left the home of her mother, saying he was coming back to Cambridge.

His many staunch Harvard friends declare that if he returned he could clear himself of the awful charge, but his failure to come back and an element to the case that makes the police redouble their efforts to locate him.

SUSPICION OF SUICIDE.

There seems to be no doubt that Mrs. Muenter died of poison. The undertaker who prepared her for burial says that the body when he first saw it was contorted. Professor Whitney, of Harvard Medical School, who analyzed the contents of the stomach and intestines, says that slow arsenical poisoning was the cause of death.

Eugene R. Krembs of Chicago, brother of the dead woman, believes that there was something radically wrong about the death of Mrs. Muenter. He said last night at his home: "The request of Muenter to have the body cremated, his failure to be present when the ashes were interred, his lack of knowledge as to the exact hour when my sister died and his failure to appear since, with the facts revealed by the post-mortem examination, all go to convince me that something is wrong.

"We are in a dilemma to know whether he is in his right mind or not. We especially wanted Muenter arrested before the news could get to the public. Now I fear his body will be found in the river or somewhere else, self-destroyed.

PECULIAR INCIDENTS.

"We are convinced that many stories of a startling nature will come to light if he is arrested."

Incidents connected with Mrs. Muenter's death are peculiar. She died practically without medical attendance. On April 6 she gave birth to a daughter. Mrs. Edith Chase of Cambridge, a Christian Scientist, was called to the home, No. 107 Oxford street, to attend her. Professor Muenter himself is said to be a Christian Scientist. A few days later Dr. H. B. McIntyre of Cambridge was called in, but he refused to attend the woman when he found his directions were not being carried out. Then Dr. Frederick W. Taylor was summoned. When he learned of the conditions he also declined to attend the dying woman.

Dr. Taylor says he told Muenter that his wife was not dying from the results of childbirth, but from some other cause. On the 14th and 15th Mrs. Muenter's condition was very serious. She died the 16th, and then the two doctors held a quiet autopsy, removing the stomach and intestines and sending them to Professor Whitney, who found traces of arsenic.

The doctors say that while Mrs. Muenter was on the high road to recovery from childbirth, she was seized with spells of vomiting and died in agony.

DENIED DEATH CERTIFICATE.

Muenter asked Dr. Taylor for a death certificate, but this was refused him. The case seemed so suspicious that Dr. Taylor notified Medical Examiner Swan, telling him of the symptoms. Swan took the case in hand and notified District Attorney Sanderson, who communicated with the police. The authorities then set about locating Muenter.

Meanwhile, Muenter had received a certificate of death and started for his wife's home in Chicago with the body and his two children. Mrs. Bertha Derrick of Cam-fant. She returned home immediately after she had placed the body in the care of its grandmother.

Mrs. Muenter's body was cremated al-bridge accompanied him to care for the in-most immediately upon its arrival in Chicago and the ashes interred in Rosedale Cemetery.

Muenter was not at the burial and left his mother-in-law's home shortly afterwards, saying he would return to Harvard. It is reported at the university that he sent in his resignation when he reached Chicago. He wrote to another Harvard professor two letters, which, the receiver says, were almost incoherent. When he was found to be missing, his sister prepared to come here and locate him if possible, but on learning that the police had called for his arrest, she abandoned the trip.

All day yesterday the Cambridge police worked on the case without let-up and claimed to have discovered important information which they refuse to disclose at present.

One fact established is that Mrs. Muenter was recently insured for $1,000, but her husband has made no effort as yet to collect the money.

Persons who dealt with Muenter immediately after his wife's death say he was extremely nervous and excitable, but they attributed it to grief over his loss.

He wished first to bury Mrs. Muenter at once in Cambridge, but when her family insisted that the body be interred in Chicago he was in almost feverish haste to start for that city. He gave Mrs. Derick, who acted as nurse on the journey, but two hours in which to prepare for the trip.

Undertaker Wood of Cambridge, who embalmed the body, says that when he told Muenter that an autopsy must be performed the professor exclaimed excitedly: "I will not allow an autopsy."

Then he asked the undertaker to have the body cremated at once, and when the latter told him this could not be done until a doctor's certificate of death had been issued, Muenter, the undertaker declares, grew frantic.

DR. SWAN FEARED FOUL PLAY, HE SAYS

"I was suspicious of the cause of Mrs. Muenter's death, and at the autopsy I had the stomach and intestines removed for further examination, as I was not satisfied with the results from the autopsy," declared Dr. William D. Swan, medical examiner for Middlesex County, last night.

"I was called into the trouble because, as there had been two physicians in the case and each had refused to issue a certificate of death, it was my duty as medical examiner to view the body. The condition of the stomach and intestines was greatly inflamed, and that fact alone was suspicious, to my mind.

"I sent the organs to Professor Whitney, and at once notified Captain Hurley of the Cambridge police of my suspicion. That is all I care to say for publication, as I have been notified by District Attorney Sanderson to say nothing on the case."

SAYS HUSBAND WAS "KIND AND LOVING"

Mrs. Henry C. Nickerson of No. 18 Grove street, Winchester, who was engaged last February to treat Mrs. Muenter during her illness, makes the following statement:

"I was asked by Mr. Muenter to take charge of her case last February. I was in Washington at the time the child was born, which was two weeks before it was expected. When I returned I was called to Cambridge, April 9. Everything then seemed to be harmonious, but I learned that liver trouble had developed, which was indicated by incessant vomiting. On the next day, Tuesday, the nausea continued, and examination revealed a lump as large as one's fist in the region of the liver. Wednesday morning she was decidedly better, but still experienced a burning sensation in the region of her stomach, which gradually grew less painful, the nausea subsiding. At the same time it seemed to me there was a violent pressure which might indicate enlargement of the liver, which afterward proved to be the case.

"Saturday Professor Muenter was of the opinion that his wife was growing worse, and insisted on calling a physician, and I retired from the case. I understand that the physician at once detected a serious liver trouble."

Mrs. Nickerson, being asked regarding the attitude of Professor Muenter toward his wife during her sickness, said:

"All during his wife's sickness he was kind, sympathetic and attentive. He appeared to me to be a most loving husband, willing to do all that any man could under the circumstances."

DOCTOR REFUSED TO "MIX IN THE CASE"

Dr. F. W. Taylor of Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge, who was called in to see Mrs. Muenter two days before her death, said:

"On April 14 Mr. Muenter left word at my house for me to call at his house and see his wife, who was ill. I went over to the house and was met by Muenter, who told me that he thought his wife was suffering from a fever brought on by childbirth about a week before. He also told me that during her confinement she had been treated by a Christian Scientist, but, becoming scared at her condition, wanted me to examine her.

"I told him that under the conditions I did not care to mix in the matter at all; that I didn't care to take any responsibility after such treatment.

"At this visit Meunter also told me that his wife had been vomiting for a week and that she was very weak.

"I walked over to the bed where Mrs. Muenter lay and after a casual examination saw that she was not suffering from the effects of childbirth and told Muenter so. I then left the house. I did not prescribe any treatment for the sick woman.

"The next day, April 15, I again called at the house and found the woman weaker than on the previous day. She looked very much exhausted. At this visit I saw no one else but Muenter. I did not see the children or the nurse.

"I left in a short time. At this visit I did not prescribe anything, as I said before, not caring to mix in the matter at all.

"On the morning of the 16th Professor Muenter called me up on the telephone and told me that early in the morning his wife had died and asked me to call at the house and sign a certificate so that he could have her body removed and cremated.

"I went over to his house, but after looking at the body told him that I did not care to sign the certificate, and that the medical examiner would have to be called in. I went out and called up Dr. Swan and told him of the peculiar circumstances of the case and that I could not satisfactorily explain the cause of death."

TWO HARVARD MEN TRIED FOR MURDER

Two members of the teaching corps at Harvard have already faced murder charges, and should Professor Muenter be tried on a similar charge it will make three cases to have a connection with that institution of learning.

The two cases now passed involved men who were only assistants in their departments, belonging to that class of teachers who are hired annually by the university to relieve the regular members of the teaching corps of a portion of the drudgery.

In the famous case of Professor John White Webster, who was tried for the murder of Dr. George Parkman, found guilty and hanged more than fifty years ago, a full member of the faculty, the professor of chemistry, met a shameful death. The cause of the murder was a dispute over a debt which Professor Webster owed to Dr. Parkman.

Charles R. Eastman, an instructor in zoology at Harvard, was the second Harvard teacher to face a murder charge. He was arrested and tried for the murder of his brother-in-law, Richard H. Grogan, Jr., and after a long trial was found not guilty.

POLICE CASE IS READY, NOW HUNT FOR ACCUSED MAN

Chief Inspector Hurley says that the Cambridge police did everything possible in the case, and that all that remains was to get Muenter into custody.

"We have been working on the case since we were advised by Professor Whitney that arsenic had been detected in the stomach in sufficient quantity to cause death," he said, "and we can't do anything more at present." Professor Francke says that he does not know anything of the whereabouts of Mr. Muenter, and that he was not granted a leave of absence.

"We have searched the house where the Muenters lived, and have made a canvass of places in Cambridge where poison might be obtained. We have not puzzled much, however, as to places where the poison might be had, as it would be very easy for a person with the proper acquaintance in Cambridge to obtain arsenic in almost any quantity. We have found that Muenter was an extremely busy man, a very hard student, and ambitious in the extreme to do well in his profession. Possibly it is significant that some of the letters he has written to Cambridge are not altogether coherent.

"I can't find any definite motive whatsoever for any crime by him, and I can't find that there has ever been anything at all peculiar about him, unless I except his great desire to advance himself in his profession and excessive study. But we have the report of Professor Whitney that the cause of death was arsenic, and there we are."

NEGRO DENIES ATTEMPT TO ROB

William Byron, the young negro who is charged with attempting to rob Miss Ilae Chapman at the corner of Rutland and Newland streets yesterday, and with stabbing Thomas Crompton, who tried to assist the young woman, pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault in court to-day and was held in $300 until May 1.

On the robbery charge he was held in $2,000 for the Grand Jury.

WOMAN'S BROTHER OPPOSED WEDDING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Walter Krembs, brother of the dead woman, to-day told in detail of his suspicions of Muenter and of the man's actions before his disappearance.

"I never liked the man," said Krembs. "I always opposed the match, and did all I could to persuade my sister not to marry the man. I told her no good would come of the marriage and now—you see.

"She was bound to marry him, and it was useless to try to dissuade her. While they were engaged Muenter went to Europe for a short trip. He was to return in a couple of months, but he stayed twice that time.

"Word came back to us from friends in Germany that Muenter had been making love to a girl there, and was engaged to her.

"We investigated and found this to be true. So we told my sister that she must give the man up. We made known all the facts, and finally she wrote breaking the engagement.

"Meantime the girl in Germany had learned that Muenter was engaged to my sister here, and she, too, broke her engagement. So Muenter, who had had two sweethearts, found himself with none.

"He came back to Chicago and succeeded in working himself into the good graces of my sister again.

"I urged her not to marry him, but she did in spite of his proved fickleness.

"The man's strange demeanor when he brought my sister's body back increased my dislike for him. He acted like a crazy man.

"I was still more suspicious of him.

"Her body was cremated April 18. On that day Muenter came to me and asked to borrow $150, saying that needed it to pay the expenses of the cremation. I finally let him have it. He disappeared that day before the burial."

The mother of Muenter, it was learned, lives in Los Angeles, and the police think that he may have fled thither. Telegrams were sent to that and other Western cities warning the police to watch for him. The sudden departure of Miss Bertha Muenter for Boston was entirely unexplained at the Hotel Hollenden, where she lived. She left last night, giving but a few hours' notice to the proprietress of the hotel, Mrs. Mary T. Braine, and saying that she would return.

She left all her possessions save a little baggage in her room.

"She did not tell me her reason for going," said Mrs. Braine. "She only said that her business was urgent and that she had to leave at once. This is vacation time, so she did not have to arrange with the school board for leave of absence."

MRS. DERRICK TELLS OF CHICAGO TRIP

Mrs. Bertha Derrick of No. 80 Garfield street, Cambridge, the nearest neighbor of the Muenters told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter of the sad journey to Chicago in which she accompanied Professor Muenter and cared for the ten day old bay. She said:

"In the first place I am not a nurse. I never was one. I never had a child so young in my arms until I handled the Muenter baby. Further I am not a Christian Scientist and have no affiliation with them. I a man Episcopalian.

"The Muenters were our neighbors. I knew them by sight, that's all. I had heard that Mrs. Muenter was from the West and had few friends here, so when she died I called—they lived just next door—and offered my services to Professor Muenter. I did this in a truly Christian spirit, as I consider it my duty to do everything in my power to help a neighbor in affliction.

"Next day Professor Muenter called at my house in great distress. He told me that the nurse who was to accompany him and the children to Chicago had changed her mind at the last instant and refused to go. He asked me to take her place and I consented.

"At only one time on the trip did the professor act strangely. As we came into one of the stations near Chicago he suddenly said that he was going to get off the train and buy a postal card to send to a friend in Chicago. When he got back on the train he had the card and then turned and asked me what he had got it for. During the trip I refrained from talking with him about his wife, for he was in terrible distress and grief.

"We arrived in Chicago at 5:30 in the afternoon, and I left for home at 10:30 the next morning. I spent the night at Professor Muenter's sister's home. Just before I left to take the train the Professor called and told me that he would soon see me again in Cambridge."

POISON EVIDENCE READY FOR EXHIBIT

Carefully preserved in alcohol in the laboratory of Professor Whitney of Harvard University are the stomach and intestines of Mrs. Erich Muenter, undeniable medical evidence of the administration of arsenic. It was only when these organs were removed and placed where they could be produced when wanted that Medical Examiner Swan consented to issue a death certificate.

"I hesitated a long time before I decided to take this action," said Dr. Swan to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "and after a consultation with Professor Whitney, found that it was advisable to do so only after those organs which had been affected by poison were removed. This was done and the certificate granted. We can show Mrs. Muenter's stomach and intestines in the court room at any time now and can produce the highest medical witnesses to swear that they show evidences of poisoning."

WOMAN FLEES IN TERROR FROM MADDENED DOG

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, April 28.—A savage dog owned by Miss Eva Hogan of No. 592 Boston street went mad to-day, chased Miss Hogan up a flight of stairs, drove her into an attic chamber, ran down stairs to the first floor, held Mrs. James Donnegan and four children in terror behind their locked kitchen door, bit Miss Hogan's pet cat, stood at bay in a dark halway when Patrolman James Linehan crawled in through an interior window, sprang at the policeman, was clubbed off and finally succumbed to three rifle bullets. The cat, the only living thing actually bit by the dog, had to be killed.

FIND GIRL BABE ON DOORSTEP

A girl baby, scarcely five hours old and wrapped in only a few sheets of newspapers, was picked up on the doorstep of No. 78 Sawyer street, Roxbury, to-day by Patrolman Killian of the Roxbury Crossing station. The child was taken to the City Hospital in a patrol wagon, and Dr. Stone pronounced it in perfect health.

Killian was doing his beat about 7 o'clock and saw the bundle on the doorstep. As he was nearly past it he heard a cry and saw the paper move. Killian wrapped the child under his coat and started for the patrol box. The police are now seeking the mother.

THIRD BOSTON AMERICAN RELIEF TRAIN LEAVES THIS AFTERNOON

Two Long Trains, Loaded with Food, Clothing, and Household Goods, Already on Way—Help Load Third Train Quickly.

Rush in your donations for the San Francisco sufferers. Trains leave Boston every day laden with food, clothing and necessaries for the earthquake victims.

Tons of supplies of all kinds, clothing, food, household goods and medicines, have already been shipped to the San Francisco sufferers by the BOSTON AMERICAN, and are now speeding across the continent. All the railroads have given right of way to these shipments, which will, in a measure, allay the suffering of the thousands in the stricken city.

The third BOSTON AMERICAN shipment starts this afternoon over the Boston & Maine Railroad. The second went yesterday. Just as long as goods of any kind are sent in the BOSTON AMERICAN will see that they are forwarded. There is no limit to the number of shipments except the limits of the generosity of the givers.

Although tons of supplies have been sent, tons more are needed. There are thousands of people in need of clothing, household goods and other necessities. The people of New England are responding nobly to the appeal from the other side of the continent, and the outpouring of practical, useful sympathy should be continued.

In the BOSTON AMERICAN shipment to-day is $500 of clothing contributed by the Bernard Wenners Company, the Crystal Rock tailors, at Broadway and Dorchester avenue, South Boston. It was a particularly thoughtful gift, and will relieve a great amount of suffering among men, women and children.

A large case of hosiery has been contributed by H. H. Wood & Co. of Laconia, N. H.

The Educator Food Company of No. 205 Tremont street sent a ton of crackers, which will supply an immediate need. A truckload of furniture has been offered by W. P. B. Brooks & Co. of No. 194 Hanover street, and will be sent at once. There are thousands in San Francisco who lost all their household goods in the earthquake and the fires that followed and are now sleeping in tents without furniture and with little bedding.

The sufferers in San Francisco have very little of anything. There is hardly a thing used in daily life that is not needed there, and too much cannot be sent.

In order to insure safe and prompt delivery of your contribution be careful that whatever you send is directed

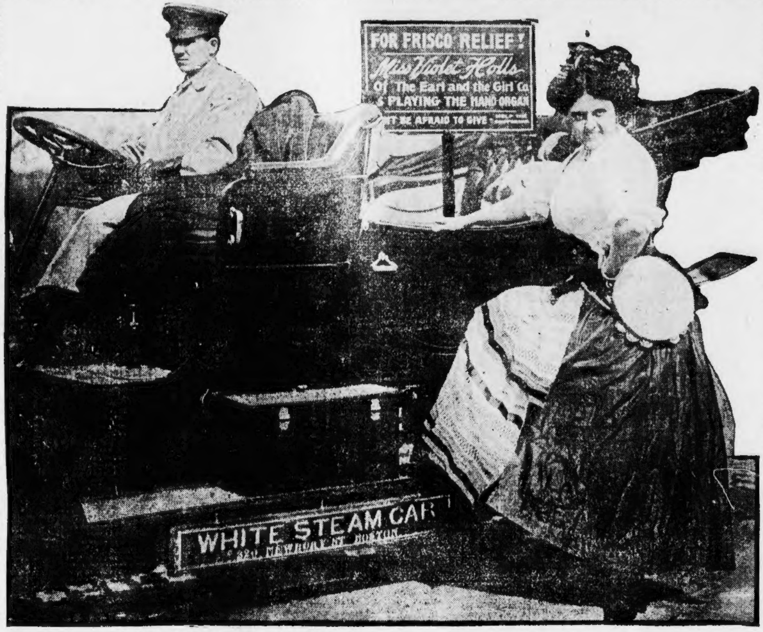
MISS VIOLET HOLLS IN HER ITALIAN COSTUME WORKING FOR THE AMERICAN RELIEF FUND.



The automobile which carried the popular songstress on her charitable mission was furnished by the White Steam Car Company.

MONEY FILLS VIOLET HOLLS'S TAMBOURINE

Pretty Actress, Dressed as an Italian Girl, Gathers $101.33 for the Fund.

BLESSED THOSE WHO GAVE

Playing a tambourine to the accompaniment of a hurdy-gurdy on the Common yesterday afternoon, Miss Violet Holls, the beautiful and popular actress now with Sam S. and Lee Shubert's production of "The Earl and the Girl" at the Majestic Theatre, raised over a hundred dollars for the BOSTON AMERICAN fund to relieve stricken San Francisco.

Thousands of persons returning home from business gathered near the Park street entrance to the subway and enjoyed the unique entertainment. Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and a score of dollar bills were thrown into the tambourine as the graceful performer passed in and out soliciting aid for the earthquake sufferers.

Attired in the picturesque costume of an Italian peasant, Miss Holls presented a charming picture as she beat and jingled the tambourine for sweet charity's sake. On her shapely head was a red bandana encircled with golden spangles that set off her vivacious smile and sparkling eyes, as with earnest voice she pleaded her cause. A Russian girdle with dagger of costly and beautiful workmanship, and a green skirt covered by a vari-hued apron, completed her fetching costume.

Did Not Like to Stop.

"Please give. No matter how little, all helps," was the request that brought quick response from men, women and even children.

"God bless you. Those poor people need it all," was the rewarding salutation to the cheerful giver.

Only the pressing call of her engagement at the theatre in the evening induced the enthusiastic young woman to leave the place.

"I don't want to go while there is a cent to be obtained for that fund," she replied when reminded of the time. Reluctantly she seated herself again in the White steamer in which she had arrived at the scene of action.

Before leaving, however, the megaphone man, perched upon the wagon containing the hurdy-gurdy, auctioned off the tambourine with which Miss Holls had done such good work for the relief fund. Bidders there were in plenty, and it was knocked down to F. M. Seamans, the shoe manufacturer, of No. 144 Lincoln street, for $5.50. The tambourine bore the autograph of Miss Holls and the date.

License as Souvenir.

As a souvenir of her novel experience Miss Holls was presented with the special license allowing her to give her impromptu performance upon the Common for the relief fund. The official document, bearing the signature of Mayor Fitzgerald and the gold seal of the municipality was neatly framed without charge by the Hayes Art Store Co. of No. 357 Washington street.

A portion of the costume worn by Miss Holls was given gratis for the occasion by Curtis & Weld, the costumers, of No. 34 Hayward place. The two automobiles in which Miss Holls and her escort were carried to the Common were donated by the White Steamer Company, who have freely permitted the use of their machines for the swelling of the relief fund.

The sum of $101.33 was placed in the fund as the result of Miss Holls's efforts, a remarkable response to her appeal, considering the small amounts that went to make it up and the fact that it was all collected at one place.

Household Goods, Food and Clothing Needed at Once

CARS for San Francisco, carrying house furnishing goods, provisions, medicines and other necessities for the afflicted district of California, are being loaded and started for the West as rapidly as possible. Contributions in the way of supplies to provide comfort for the sufferers should be sent in at once. Immediate needs are being taken care of. Persons having anything to give, furniture, kitchen utensils, bedding, clothing, provisions of all sorts, cannot send them too quickly.

AMERICAN RELIEF FUND.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN fund to relieve the sufferers of the San Francisco earthquake is growing at a rapid rate, through the generosity of the people of Boston, quick to respond to the call for help from the stricken district.

From all sides money is pouring in. Some of the sums are large and some are small, but all are equally welcome for the good work.

The undiminished interest of the public is shown by the variety of sources from which the contributions come. One worthy of special mention is that of William F. Donagan, the well-known street singer, who came into the AMERICAN office yesterday with $5, earned by him singing popular melodies in the streets. HEARST RELIEF FUND IS NOW $189,496.32

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Word was received from Iowa yesterday that the Hearst San Francisco relief train from New York is breaking every passenger train schedule, and is rushing toward the coast. By the time it left Chicago it was a sixteen-car train. It pulled out of Chicago twenty minutes behind passenger train No. 13. At Louden, Iowa, the relief special overtook No. 13, and has now settled down for the hardest part of its run.

The greatest activity was manifested by everyone in New York yesterday in the relief work, and at midnight the Hearst fund amounted to $189,496.32. In addition to this, about $20,000 more was pledged that is not included in the total, and it is expected by to-morrow night the $200,000 mark will have been passed.

Unusual as Joe Weber's bazar has been, one is to be opened at the Belasco to-day in aid of the fund that will surpass it. It will be for the most part an open-air affair. A number of booths are to be constructed in front of the theatre and will be presided over by favorite actresses. The bazar is to continue to-day and Monday, and on Tuesday there will be a special matinee in the Belasco, all of the proceeds from both affairs to be given to the Hearst San Francisco relief fund.

BOGUS RELIEF AGENT ARRESTED AND FINED $5 IN BROOKLINE

William T. Boyd, who posed in Brookline as a representative of the Hearst relief fund and the Salvation Army and collected money to help the San Francisco sufferers, was brought into the Brookline Court to-day and fined $5 for obtaining money under false pretences. He had $7.70 in his pockets and told the judge he had only taken one contribution.

Boyd called on James Wheeler of No. 22 Buckminster road yesterday. He showed clippings from the BOSTON AMERICAN and said he was collecting for the San Francisco fund. Wheeler was suspicious and called the police by telephone.

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

ALL RECORDS BROKEN IN TEACHERS' VOTES

This Ballot Counts One Vote.

Mail votes to the European Tour Editor, P. O. Box 5131, Boston.

All records were broken yesterday in the voting for teachers in the SUNDAY AMERICAN'S free European Tour Election.

The balloting was the heaviest of any day since the opening of the contest.

There are now about 1,000 teachers being voted for, and though space forbids the publication of the entire list each day, careful record is kept at election headquarters of every ballot cast, and "dark horses" may spring out of the ranks and into the "winning lists" any day.

Miss Mary W. Bonython of Eliot School made a notable gain yesterday, joining the five teachers who are in position of winners of the "European Tour" in the Greater Boston Division, and retiring Mary B. Tenney of Williams School one point.

Miss Madeline Foppiano went above Miss Elizabeth Rogers and Miss Mary A. Haverty passed by three other teachers among the ten who stand in position of winners of the "Shakespearean Tour." Miss Mary Burnett gained two points and Miss Susan B. McDonald one.

In the Massachusetts Division Miss Alice J. O'Gara took third place away from Miss Annie V. McGourty, the latter being supplanted as a winner of the "European Tour" and stepping back into the "Shakespearean" class. Miss Bessie Churbuck crowded Miss Nellie Carroll out of the winning list, and Miss Marie McDonnell also went ahead of Miss McDonnell.

Business Agent J. W. Barton and Martin T. Joyce of Electrical Workers' Union No. 103 spoke on trade matters. Ten dollars was donated the striking collar starchers of Troy, N. Y. MAY BE BISHOP OF PORTLAND

According to a special cable dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day from Rome, the Rev. Michael C. McDonough of Bath, Me., is now regarded in Vatican circles as the man most likely to succeed Archbishop O'Connell as Bishop of Portland, Me. It is believed that Fr. McDonough will probably get the appointment about the middle of next month. Fr. McDonough is pastor of the church of the Immaculate Conception at Bath, Me., and one of the consultors of the Portland diocese. He was formerly curate at the Portland Cathedral.

The other two candidates are Rev. Edward F. Hurley of Portland, the present administrator of the diocese, and the Rev. M. F. Walsh of St. Mary's Church, Bangor, procurator fiscalis of the Portland diocese.

DIVORCE TO GET CASH; TO REWED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Mrs. Helen Moloney, the beautiful wife of James Moloney, the Chicago manufacturer, obtained a divorce from him solely to get a $500,000 estate left to her by her mother, on condition that she be separated from him. The couple are to be remarried this Summer, just as soon as Mrs. Moloney perfects title to the estate.

This statement is made by Mr. Moloney, who declares groundless the charge that his wife has flirted too much with W. J. White, the "Chewing Gum King" of Cleveland.

Letter Mother Hopes Missing Son Will See

"Albert, si tu vois cette photographie, retourne tout de suite a Revere, ou ecris carte postale a Clara, qui ira te chercher. Dis ou tu es. TA MERE."

MOTHER SEEKS MISSING BOY

In a note written in her native tongue Mrs. Francis Tremblay, a young and pretty French widow, of No. 134 Boulevard, Revere, has asked the BOSTON AMERICAN to find her little fourteen-year-old son, who disappeared last Wednesday morning.

With fifty-five cents in his pocket Albert boarded a train for Boston. Nothing has been heard from him since and his pretty mother is nearly distracted.

Mrs. Tremblay feels sure that her son will reply to this note in his native French if he sees it.

Young Tremblay has lived in Revere two years. He is five feet tall and weighs eighty pounds, has medium complexion and blue eyes. He wore blue serge knickerbockers of fine material, blue sweater with red collar, a white linen collar bearing his initials in red ink, a new gray coat and new shoes.

MAYOR PLANTS ARBOR DAY TREE

In Massachusetts and many other States of the Union to-day is being celebrated as Arbor Day. Governor Guild issued his proclamation about two weeks ago formally setting aside the last Saturday in April as a day for the planting of trees, shrubbery and vines by the citizens of this Commonwealth.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock Mayor John F. Fitzgerald plants a tree near the Park street entrance of the subway in the Public Garden. School children will take part, and the Mayor and others will make speeches. Many of the schools of the city planted trees in the grounds around the buildings, and the children at such institutions were taught the necessity of preserving the trees and shrubbery as an essential to the public health and comfort.

DANCE GIVEN FOR FUND BRINGS $42

The sum of $42 was realized for the San Francisco relief fund of the BOSTON AMERICAN by a dance given under the auspices of J. Williams in Columbus hall, No. 994 Washington street, on Thursday evening. Mr. Williams donated the total receipts of the evening to help the sufferers.

"THE GREAT AUTO CHASE."

By Thompson Peel.

CHAPTER XIV.

New Complications.

(Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

THE automobile containing Joe Morgan, Chester Fiske and Edward West drew up in front of Miss Pierce's select school for girls in Cambridge half an hour later. Each occupant of the car had been busy with his own thoughts. In the detective's mind had been running a sort of general review of the entire affair; West himself was absorbed in speculation as to the possible fate of Margaret Taylor, while the giant, Morgan, was thinking of the little girl he had lost through the knavery of Leonard Simms.

Before they started West had exacted a promise from Fiske that he would ask Miss Pierce no embarrassing questions—that is questions touching on that period of her life which had been so strangely brought to light by the appearance of the photograph.

Frankly West and Morgan did not believe evil of Miss Pierce. It was some mystery they could not unravel now, but they were both loyal to her.

When West rang the bell the door was opened by a maid who, recognizing him, immediately ushered them into the reception room.

"Is Miss Pierce at home, Jane?" West inquired.

"No, sir," was the reply.

Fiske's eyebrows were elevated a trifle, and West, for some undefined reason, felt uncomfortable.

"When will she return?" he asked.

"I can't say, sir," replied Jane.

"How long has she been gone?"

"Only about a quarter of an hour, sir. She said, particularly, that she did not know just when she would be back."

There was a pause for a moment.

"Do you know where she is gone?" Fiske inquired.

Jane glanced at the detective, then at Edward West, as if asking whether she should answer the question.

"Mr. Fiske is a friend of mine, Jane," West said. "We are much worried over the disappearance of Miss Taylor. Mr. Fiske and Mr. Morgan here are aiding me in a search for her."

West paused.

"Do you know where she is gone?" Fiske repeated.

"No, sir, I do not."

"Do you know if she had planned to be out to-day?" Fiske went on.

"She did not intend to go out, sir. Some matter—"

"Can you tell us why she changed her mind?"

Jane again hesitated, but a reassuring glance from West caused her to suddenly drop her reticence.

"If it will help find Miss Taylor," she said, "I will answer any questions the gentleman asks."

"It will help find her," said West.

"Again, can you tell us why she changed her mind?" Fiske asked.

"A telegram came for her," Jane answered. "She seemed much disturbed about it, and went out in a great hurry, telling me, as I said, that she did not know when she would return."

"But she will return?"

The maid was a little startled.

"So far as I know, yes, sir," she replied.

"Do you know what the telegram was about?"

"No, sir. But it must have been bad news, for it made her cry."

"You think, then, she was in trouble?"

"I'm sure of it, sir."

Fiske walked over to the window and stood looking out thoughtfully for several minutes.

"Do you know," he asked, finally, as he turned, "if Miss Pierce had any visitors to-day or yesterday?"

"Well, sir, I——" the girl began.

"Don't be afraid to answer, Jane," West broke in, reassuringly. "If Miss Pierce is in trouble we are only anxious to aid her."

"I don't know whether I'm right in speaking of it, sir, but——"

"Yes, yes, go on," urged Fiske.

"There was somebody here last night—rather late last night, too."

"Ah! Well, now just what happened?"

"Well, sir, it was this way," Jane explained. "I had a bad toothache, and Miss Pierce sent me to bed early—about half-past ten o'clock. She is very kind hearted."

"You just bet she is," broke in Morgan, emphatically, speaking for the first time. "That's the Kate I knew, as kind-hearted as you make 'em."

Fiske nodded for the girl to proceed.

"When I had gone to bed," she resumed, "I heard the front door bell ring, and as it was my evening on the door Miss Pierce herself answered the ring. I heard some one come in that Miss Pierce seemed to know, for she said distinctly, 'My dear!' surprised like."

Jane had gathered assurance from the close attention paid to her narrative by the three listeners.

"My tooth finally got so bad," she resumed, "that I decided I'd go down to the kitchen for some toothache drops that were there. As I passed through the hall I heard some one talking and crying in the reception room."

"Could you tell who the visitor was by the voice?"

Fiske asked the question eagerly, and both West and Morgan leaned forward to catch the answer.

"No, sir," she replied. "I had my face wrapped up, and could not hear very well, but I know now who the visitor was."

"Who?" The query came simultaneously from the three men.

"It was Miss Margaret Taylor, sir."

POSSE HUNTS FUGITIVE IN VERMONT HILLS

Daring Assailant of Young Woman Is Pursued by Angry Citizens.

RUTLAND, Vt., April 28.—Threatening lynch law, a Rutland posse is scouring the hills in this vicinity for Walter Berry, who attacked Miss Martha Freeman here last night. The young woman was set upon near an empty house. Her screams did not arouse the neighborhood in time to capture her assailant.

A posse was at once organized and started in pursuit of Berry, who was recognized by Mrs. Freeman's description. The man was traced to the settlement of Ninevah, but here his trail was lost. It is believed that he has taken to the hills and the posse is in hopes of capturing him when he endeavors to obtain food.

9,945 WRITE AMERICAN TO SAVE TUCKER

Out of 10,147 Votes Sent to This Paper, Only 202 Were Against Commutation.

That interest in the fate of Charles L. Tucker is at fever heat all through New England is proven by the fact that 10,147 readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN voted either for or against the commutation of the young man's death sentence on the petition blanks printed in this paper.

The petitions which favored clemency to the youthful prisoner outnumbered those against commutation by a great majority. There were 9,945 petitions for mercy, while but 202 voted that the death sentence be carried out. All of these petitions will be turned over to Governor Curtis Guild, Jr.

Public feeling is intensely aroused over this matter. It has manifested itself not only in the number of petitions received by the BOSTON AMERICAN, but also by long lists of names signed upon papers at the head of which are pasted BOSTON AMERICAN petitions which had been marked in favor of Tucker. Many contained scores of names, while one received was signed by 100 persons.

KING EDWARD DRIVES AUTO UP VESUVIUS

NAPLES, April 28.—Through mud knee deep King Edward of England yesterday drove an automobile to the summit of Mt. Vesuvius.

In the car with the King were Queen Alexandra and the Duke and Duchess of Aosta. The paths to the mountain summit have been regarded for days as almost impassable for vehicles of any kind, and a heavy storm just before the visit planned by the royal party, it was believed, would cause the trip to be abandoned. King Edward, however, persisted in the project, and after a hard climb of several hours the party reached the crater.

King Edward before leaving gave $4,000 to the Vesuvius relief fund for himself and Queen Alexandra.

From his yacht, the Victoria, the King opened telegraph communication with King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, and warm greetings were exchanged between the monarchs.

MRS. DUKE SENT LOVE MESSAGES BY TELEGRAPH

Dispatches Produced in Divorce Trial Tell Huntoon to Send Letters to Maid.

NEWARK, N. J., April 28.—Six telegrams, alleged to have been sent by Mrs. J. B. Duke to Frank T. Huntoon, while she was in North Carolina, were identified by Nellie Sands, Mrs. Duke's maid, at the Duke divorce trial yesterday. In the telegrams the "party" referred to is said to be J. B. Duke, the plaintiff. The Duke who "died" was his father, and the "Nellie" was the maid who identified the telegrams. The telegrams follow:

May 4, 1905.

F. T. Huntoon, the Wolcott, Thirty-first street and Fifth avenue, New York—Arrived safe. Party very ill. Have telegraphed Nellie to leave this afternoon. Send me message by her. L. D.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The late Joseph Jefferson's collection of pictures, comprising seventy-four examples, was sold at auction last night for $229,135. Mauve's "Return of the Flock," for which Jefferson paid $2,500 in 1892, brought $42,250.

SUSTAINS TAUNTON MAYOR.

FALL RIVER, April 28.—Judge Charles U. Bell of the Superior Court has affirmed the action of Mayor John B. Tracey of Taunton removing Daniel L. Brownell and Dr. E. N. Clark, license commissioners, on charges of inefficiency and irregularity in granting licenses.

SHERIDAN WINS WEIGHT PUT AT ATHENS

Another Victory for the American Team in Athens Games.

ATHENS, April 28.—The American team got a good start again to-day in the continuation of the Olympic games. Martin Sheridan of the Irish-American A. C. of New York showed that he is still in excellent condition by winning the weight-putting contest. A Hungarian athlete took second place, and third position was captured by Sweden. Sheridan's distance was 43 feet 4 inches.

MINERS TOLD TO SURRENDER OR TO STRIKE

Operators Reject Mitchell's Compromise—Will Consider Concession.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The compromise suggested for a settlement of the threatened anthracite coal strike by President Mitchell has been refused by the operators. They will consider only arbitration by the strike commission or concession to their terms. They say that they are prepared for a strike and have returned Mitchell's compromise offer without going back a step. They have put the question up to the miners with an indifference as to which course they may see fit to take.

The question will be officially answered next week. The whole anthracite region is in a ferment of excitement. President Mitchell has not yet issued a statement and has accepted the reply of the operators without a word.

The letter announcing the decision of the operators concludes with the significant words:

"We trust that on Tuesday next the deliberate judgment of the anthracite workers will result in the acceptance of that proposition (the renewal of the expired agreement) but if not that they will join with us in the arbitration we have offered. Failing to meet us on either proposition, the responsibility of a strike must rest upon you."

New York and every anthracite consuming centre will suffer from a coal shortage within three months, and coal will sell at the strike prices of four years ago if a strike is declared. The great storage supply, said to be 8,000,000,000 tons, which it was declared would last far into next Fall, already shows inroads made in it by the normal demand. Operators through the region admit that the reserve supply will be exhausted by the middle of August in the event of a strike. Under the suspension very little coal is being mined. The coal production of the whole hard coal region is but 15,000 tons a day at present, while the daily output with everything in operation is 225,000 tons.

COUNTESS ANNA HELPS BONI IN POLITICS

PARIS, April 28.—This was the day fixed for Count Boni de Castellane and his wife, the Countess Anna, to appear before Judge Ditte to allow the court to make the formal attempt to effect a reconciliation in the suit for divorce brought by the Countess Anna before the court proceedings can begin. Judge Ditte was notified, however, that the meeting had been postponed until after the pending French elections.

Countess Anna does not wish to injure Boni's political prospects by having his domestic troubles brought prominently before the public at this time, and agreed to the postponement for this reason.

The attorneys representing both parties maintain that there has been no change in the relations of Boni and his wife, and that the status of the case is unaltered. Nevertheless the complaisance of Countess Anna in postponing the meeting before Judge Ditte in order to assist Boni to be re-elected to the Chamber of Deputies has started reports that there is a better chance of reconciliation between the estranged husband and wife.

'I'M A FARMER, NOT FIGHTER,' JEFF SAYS

BY TAD.

New York, April 23.

James J. Jeffries, Los Angeles:

Every man has his price. What do you want to fight Jack O'Brien twenty rounds at Tuxedo Club, Essington, Pa.?

TOM O'ROURKE.

Los Angeles, April 23.

Tom O'Rourke, New York:

Every man has his price, and every man has his day, too. I was in the fighting business once, but went out of it, and I do not intend to go back again. I'm a farmer and am in the business for good. There is no chance that I will fight Jack O'Brien or anybody else at Tuxedo Club or elsewhere.

JIM JEFFRIES.

These are the telegrams that were sent trying to get Jim Jeffries back into the game again, but it looks as though attempts in this line are futile.

Of course, we never can tell what the future will bring forth or how different people might talk to the big fellow, but just at the present moment "Rube" Jeffries is for the pigs and chickens as strong as Platt and Depew are for their Senate chairs.

There is no use of Jeff trying to seek a quiet place. Solitude was not for James J.—that's a pipe.

Last year he retired from the fighting game, bought a nice little farm miles away from the gabby multitude and tried to find there the quiet and happiness that he longed for. There was nothing around him but trees, fences, barns, etc.

They let Jeff alone just about a month. As soon as he was settled and doing nicely reporters started out for interviews and photos. They got them and once more he was alone. No sooner had they gone than fight promoters sent down to see how the dope was for another fight.

Day after day Jeff answered calls, sent answers to telegrams, went to Los Angeles to deny rumors of his return to the ring, was kept so busy that he almost forgot he owned a farm.

They are after him again. There is no rest at all for Jeffries. Fight promoters, sports, managers, fighters, theatrical men and all are on the big rope now trying to pull him away from his little farm.

No matter where he is or what he does, there is no rest for him. He can't plant the potatoes because he is bothered. When he goes out to feed the pigs and chickens reporters follow him to get stories. There is no chance for rest on the farm. He can't do what he wants there.

When he is in the ring it is just as bad. He meets an opponent, and after four or five rounds the spectators jump up and demand that the fight be stopped. His fights with Munroe, Ruhlin and Kennedy were stopped. Corbett's seconds stopped that fight.

What is such a fellow going to do? On the farm they pull him away to fight, and when he does get in the ring they pull him out and chase him back because he is too good for the rest of them.

REID TALKS TO FOOTBALL MEN

Bill Reid, at a meeting of football men at Harvard last night, said that if football were sanctioned at the Cambridge University next Fall a good, hard, clean game would be played by the Crimsonites. Coach Reid also told the men that Spring football practice would be held at Soldiers' Field Monday next in order to try out the new rules. Captain Foster and Trainer McMasters spoke and impressed their hearers with the importance of appearing regularly at practice.

COLLINS' MEN HOPE TO BREAK EVEN IN SERIES

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—Jimmy Collins's Boston Americans will play their last game of the present series in this city to-day, and his men will try hard to make an even break.

Dinneen, who it was thought would do the twirling yesterday, is carded for to-day.

Cy Young, the veteran twirler, wanted to atone for the walloping he got on Thursday, so he asked Manager Collins to give him another shy at the tricky Athletics. Cy got another shy but couldn't redeem himself.

The series up to date has resulted in three shutout games. The first battle went to the credit of the Champions, 5 to 0, with Young, Gibson and Waddell pitching; the second contest was easy for the Bostons, 12 to 0, Winter, Coakley and Bartley "slabbing"; the third affair, yesterday, resulted in a 3 to 0 victory for the Athletics, with Young and Plank pitching.

Henley will probably be Mack's choice for the box to-day. However, on a pinch, Mack may send Waddell to the front, and then Boston will have to be wary or they will suffer another downfall.

The Bostons were beaten yesterday through their inability to hit Eddie Plank, the crack southpaw of the Athletics. The Pilgrims only made three scattered hits, while the Mackaloons succeeded in making eleven bingles, two of which were doubles, off "Cy."

If you want to see anything more fickle than the weather take a turn up to the South End grounds this afternoon, as the playing of the home team, judging by yesterday's game, and one in the last series with the Phillies, are shining examples of what an uncertain quantity the Tenney band is.

To-day is the last appearance of the Trolley Dodgers for a while, and they have won two of the three games played and are fast evening up the grudge held since the two teams lined up at the first of the season and the Hubites won four straight.

A week ago to-day there was a game played on the Walpole street grounds that could be bettered on the sands lots, and there is no assurance that it will not be repeated, as the local players seem to be about all in at the end of the week.

Mal Eason is slated to work to-day, with Pfeffer, the college boy, to oppose him.

O'CONNOR HAS FAST NINE OF DIAMOND STARS

Gene O'Connor, Jr., at one time star catcher of the Boston Nationals and other crack teams, is handling a bunch of fast diamond colts this season, and predicts they will make the snappiest aggregation of ball players that were ever banded together in this city.

The name of the nine of which O'Connor is the manager is the Boston Blues. It is composed of former New England League and players of equally sound experience. Pete Magee, a shifty left-handed, and O'Connor of the Eastern League, are the battery.

The Boston Blues would like games with any strong clubs in the State for a guarantee. Games with such local teams as the new Dorchestres, Roslindales, or any other good, live Boston teams preferred. Memorial Day is an open date and Manager O'Connor, who may be addressed at 3,167 Washington street, Boston, would like to arrange a game for out of town.

JIG STONE PUT UP GOOD BOUT

NEW YORK, April 28.—Sailor Burke of Philadelphia tried very hard to knock out Cy Flynn of Buffalo at the Sharkey A. C. Burke was on top of his rival throughout and on the strength of his leading was entitled to the decisions.

"Jig" Stone of Boston put up a rattling bout with Tommy Connolly of Pennsylvania. The result was a draw.

ATTELL'S BOUT WITH NEIL DECLARED OFF

LOS ANGELES, April 28.—Because Frankie Neil has gone to Chicago without notifying Manager McCarey of the Pacific A. C., and without asking for a postponement of his fight with Abe Attell, Manager McCarey has declared this fight off.

Jimmy Britt also notified McCarey that on account of the death of his sister he would be unable to fight Kid Herman until later in the Spring. McCarey declares the match off also and signed Herman and Attell for May 11 at catch weights.

The Nelson-Herrera battle has been postponed until May 25.

TERRY McGOVERN MISSING.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—The friends of Terry McGovern, the prize fighter, are again worried about his mental condition. He came to Philadelphia with the announced intention of doing something to help the San Francisco sufferers yesterday, but soon after his arrival he disappeared and could not be found even by his wife.

DARTMOUTH WAS EASY.

In an extremely one-sided game Tufts defeated Dartmouth at Medford by the score of 13 to 2. Dartmouth played a loose game in the field and Pitcher Watson of Tufts was a puzzle to them throughout, allowing but three hits and giving only two men bases on balls.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Everything points to a great race for the Excelsior Handicap this afternoon at Jamaica, as the field is very classy and of size enough to make it anything but a sure thing for any horse. Crowding around the turns may beat the best horses, and it all depends on a bit of luck in leaving the post. The five and a half furlongs handicap also should be interesting, as Lady Amelia is given a big burden to carry and she is meeting some speedy youngsters among the newcomers for sprinting honors. The rest of the card has filled well, but quality is naturally rather light, as three are selling affairs and the other is for maidens.

PIRATE CLYMER BREAKS HIS LEG

PITTSBURG, April 28.—Otis Clymer, right fielder of the Pittsburg team, broke his leg sliding to second base in the third inning of to-day's game with St. Louis. He was carried from the field to a hospital and will be out of the game most of the season, as his physicians say the break is very bad.

Beware the Deadline

The deadline proposition is not a question of age. Some men are young at seventy; others old at thirty.

In a few instances, it is a matter of temperament, but in most cases it is a question of health.

My specialty is that of keeping men on the right side of the deadline by removing the conditions which bring gray hairs.

If a man comes to me in time, he may renew his youth and laugh at age.

Nothing Was Ever Lost by Gentleness and Sweet Temper

By Beatrice Fairfax

SARCASM from the lips of a girl is not attractive.

No doubt there are many occasions when the temptation to be sarcastic is well nigh irresistible, but take my advice, girls, and conquer it.

Men keep away from the sarcastic girl; they are always afraid she is making ridicule of them, and that is just one thing that they cannot endure.

Don't try to say sharp, funny things; be content to be merely gentle, lovable girls.

A sense of humor is not as valuable a quality in a girl as it might seem. It often leads her into laughing at her friends and making them appear foolish. She sees funny things at the wrong time and place, and frequently makes herself unpopular, through hurting people's feelings.

Sarcasm Makes Enemies

IT isn't always the girl who says the funniest things who is the most popular.

You may laugh when she says witty things about others, but you have an uncomfortable feeling that she talks the same way about you when your back is turned.

Sarcasm is not kindly, and no one without kindness of heart is ever truly liked.

If you can't say nice things about people, the wisest thing to do is to hold your tongue.

You will never lose anything by keeping your temper.

Don't let yourself be imposed upon; be as firm as you like, but keep cool and good tempered.

Sarcasm only makes enemies and does you no good.

The girl with a sarcastic tongue is disliked as well as feared. She has such a horrid way of hitting one in the weakest spot.

Even if your opponent is getting the best of an argument, don't retaliate by being sarcastic. It does you more harm than any one else by making you unpopular.

Lots of girls think it a poor compliment to be called good natured.

They are quite wrong, though, for it is one of the nicest qualities a girl can possess.

The good-natured girl has hosts of of friends; every one likes to have her around, she is so cheerful and obliging.

One of the most popular girls I know is not a bit pretty, nor is she at all witty, but she is so sweet-tempered and kindly that every one loves her. She never says a sharp or bitter word to or about any one.

Men Afraid of Her

I ALSO know a young woman who is quite renowned as a wit.

Whoever is with her is always in gales of laughter.

She is usually telling some funny story about some one or other.

Men flock round her, but they don't fall in love with her; they are afraid of that caustic wit of hers.

When it comes to falling in love they would prefer some one more gentle and mild.

You know, as a rule, girls can't bear sarcastic men; well, men feel just the same way about sarcastic girls. Sarcasm is a horrid, unkind quality.

There is a lasting sting in every sarcastic speech.

In a man's eyes the greatest charm a girl can have is gentleness and sweetness. The sarcastic girl has neither of these qualities.

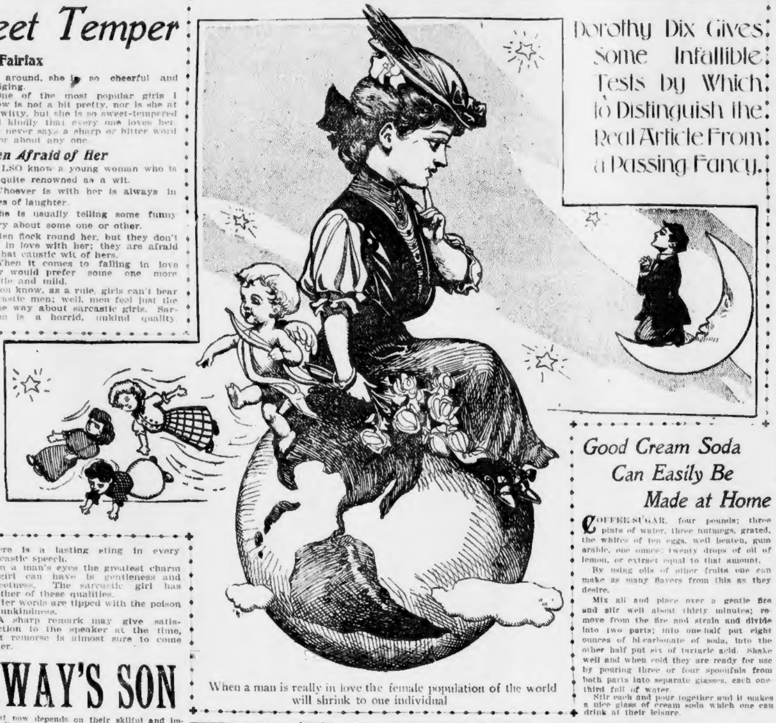
Her words are tipped with the poison of unkindness.

A sharp remark may give satisfaction to the speaker at the time, but remorse is almost sure to come later.

If Men Will Study Their Hearts According to These Rules They Can Speedily Learn

HOW TO TELL REAL LOVE FROM A FALSE ALARM

BY DOROTHY DIX



Dorothy Dix Gives Some Infallible Tests by Which to Distinguish the Real Article From a Passing Fancy.

When a man is really in love the female population of the world will shrink to one individual

A YOUNG man asks me what is real love.

Real love is that which fills the eyes, puts tenderness in the heart, gentle words upon the lips, lends energy to the hands, and places another before one's self.

These are the infallible signs, son, by which you may test your love, and find out if it is the genuine thing, or only a passing fancy.

As long as there are two women in the world to a man, he need not bother about taking his temperature. It is normal. He is not in love.

When he is really hard hit for keeps the female population of the universe will shrink to one single individual, and there will only be Sally, and some million other petticoats.

It may be that she is neither beautiful, nor clever, nor graceful, nor domestic, nor remarkable in any way, and that she does not subscribe in a single particular to the ideal that he has formed of the perfect woman, or the kind of a woman that he intended to marry.

She is Sally, and there is something about her that makes the beauty seem undesirable, the wit dull, and renders him willing to chance dyspepsia on her cooking. Somehow, someway she just fills the bill.

No man, really in love, ever wants the woman he loves changed in the slightest particular, and if you find yourself wishing that Sally was as pretty as Maud, or could talk like Genevieve, or could cook like Mary, go slow.

It's a False Alarm

YOU are not in love. It's a false alarm. You can't imagine Romeo regretting that Juliet was not as sensible and calculated to be as much help to her husband as Portia, can you? So unless the woman as she stands, with all her faults thick upon her head, just suits you, pass on, son; she is not for you.

Love puts tenderness into the heart.

Unless every time you think of a woman you want to put your arms about her and shield her from every harsh wind that blows, unless you want to make a doormat of yourself so that she may walk in ease and comfort, unless you want to make life one long picnic for her, then you are not in love.

When a man is really in love his greatest desire is to be a sort of Providence to the woman he loves.

He would like to make the world all sunshine for her; he would like to give her everything that is fair and beautiful, and he would like to keep all the hard things of life away from her.

Of course he can't, but the measure of his love is the measure of his anxiety to guard her.

Examine yourself well in this respect, son, and if you find that you are expecting Sally to bear the brunt of things, if you are making her a dumping ground for all your troubles and tribulations; if you rush to her, expecting to be consoled with your hard-luck stories, you may love her some, but not enough.

The man who hands out the real, bonafide article doesn't lay his burdens on a woman. He shoulders hers.

Not Love, but Vanity

REAL love puts only gentle words upon the lips. Some mendacious idiot, whose middle name was Ananias, said once that lovers' quarrels strengthened love. Don't you believe it. Don't you give ear for a minute to anybody who tells you that people love and spat.

There is not one word of truth in it. Love doesn't use a dagger and stab us to the heart. Love has no pleasure in seeing its beloved suffer. Love is gentle, it is tender, it is kind.

As long as you can get angry with Sally, and tell her just what you think of her conduct without regard for her feelings, rather with the hope that it will cut her to the quick, you are not in love. It is your vanity that has been hurt, not your heart.

You will often see married couples who quarrel and say things to each other that leave a blister, but who will make loud declarations that they love one another. It is false, and they know it is false. It is nothing but a bluff that they are putting up to try to deceive themselves and the world.

The man who will say things that brings tears to a woman's eyes and swears at the same time that he loves her ought to be indicted for perjury in Cupid's court.

So unless that your whole desire is to praise instead of blame Sally, unless your first impulse is to gently ask for an explanation of anything you don't understand, instead of flying off the handle and raking her over the coals, and unless you shrink from hurting her with a hard word as much as you would with a cruel blow, you are not in love.

Real love lends energy to the hands. Unless you care enough for a woman to work for her, you are not in love with her.

Love Is Not Jealous

THE man who tells a woman that he loves her and yet doesn't do anything to support her, makes a mockery of love.

Observe yourself closely in this matter, son, and if you find that you have got a feeling for a woman that makes you want to get out early and hustle late for her, go on with the wedding. You've got it, and got it bad. Moreover, it's the genuine eighteen karat stuff.

Love places another before one's self. As long as you want Sally to do what you want to do, instead of what she wants to do; as long as when you take her out to a restaurant you order steak because you like it, instead of chocolate puffs because she likes them; as long as you buy tickets for the vaudeville, because you prefer to laugh, instead of to a tragedy, because she likes to weep; as long as you make her go to prayer meeting with you, instead of your going to dances with her, don't waste your money on an engagement ring.

And don't take any stock in the jealousy theory and believe that you are in love with a girl simply because you are suspicious of her and want to monopolize her.

Real love is never jealous, because it trusts and has no room in it for doubt.

The woman who loves does not want to cut off a man's pleasure, and the man who loves rejoices in every happiness that can come to the woman.

Nothing short of this is real love. It is only near love, and it does not stand the wear and tear of everyday life.

Good Cream Soda Can Easily Be Made at Home

COFFEE SUGAR, four pounds; three pints of water, three nutmegs, grated, the whites of ten eggs, well beaten, gum arabic, one ounce; twenty drops of oil of lemon, or extract equal to that amount.

By using oils of other fruits one can make as many flavors from this as they desire.

Mix all and place over a gentle fire and stir well about thirty minutes; remove from the fire and strain and divide into two parts; into one-half put eight ounces of bi-carbonate of soda, into the other half put six of tartaric acid. Shake well and when cold they are ready for use by pouring three or four spoonfuls from both parts into separate glasses, each one-third full of water.

Stir each and pour together and it makes a nice glass of cream soda which one can drink at their leisure.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER XLIII.

Two to One

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"IT'S two to one at all events," said Edwards, as soon as he had time to recover his breath. "The odds are our way."

"Don't you believe it for a second," said Jack. "If that old scamp didn't have us at some tremendous disadvantage he'd never leave us here by ourselves. You can wager that he's got a keg of powder in your slop chest, and that the fuse is already spluttering toward it."

Edwards sprang to the chest and tore it open.

"Oh, I didn't mean it literally," said Jack. "What I meant was that he has got us entrapped in some way, and means to get rid of us very speedily. Now that he knows both of us are against him he would hardly leave us aboard ship very long."

"The scoundrel!" said Edwards. "And to think that I have worked for him and his fortunes for three cruises."

"Ingratitude is the lot of the sailorman," said Jack. "What we want to do now is not to moralize on human brutality, but to get out of here alive."

"Do you think the door is guarded?" said Edwards.

Jack laid a steadying hand on his late enemy's shoulder.

"Don't be childish," he said. "Do you think that if either you or I popped a head out of that door we wouldn't be sent to the eternal life on the instant? We've got to try some other way than that. Are you armed?"

"I've got a pistol on me, and two rifles in the rack."

"All right, get them."

Edwards's hands sought his hip pocket, and an expression of utter dismay crossed his face. His pistol was gone.

"I thought so," said Jack. "He also got my pistol while I was calling on him. Where are the rifles?"

"On the—no, by George, they're gone too."

"Of course they are," said Jack. "But he didn't know I was loaded. "Look here.""

Thrusting his hand into his pocket, Jack produced two of the tiny melinite bombs which had done him such good service in other quarters of the globe.

"Old Grierson would have given his eyes for these if he'd known I had 'em," said Jack. "But he didn't, and our salvation just now depends on their skilful and immediate use. For heaven's sake be careful," he added, as Edwards nearly allowed one of the pellets to drop out of his hand. "There's no need of killing ourselves on this expedition. Wait a minute."

He went to the little circular window of the cabin and looked out.

Three men stood on the deck nearby, each armed with a rifle.

"I thought so," he said. "We've got to get Grierson himself up here. But how?"

"I know," said Edwards. "In my cabin is an alarm apparatus that is used to summon the skipper in case of mutiny. If he hears it he'll think the crew is having trouble with us, and come boiling forward to take things into his own hands."

"Wait a minute," said Jack.

Quietly he unfastened one of the deadlights, and, holding the bomb in the palm of his hand, stood behind it. "Now go ahead with the signal."

Edward presses the button. There was no disturbance, or commotion of any kind on the deck.

But in a few seconds a tiny slip of paper, tightly rolled up, was thrown through the door of the cabin, which had been violently jerked open to permit its passage.

Jack seized it, unfolded it, and read:

"You're dealing with an old bird. Drop the bombs, Harkaway, or they'll be exploded in your hand. "G."

In amazement Jack started back toward the wall of the cabin.

How was he to deal with an enemy who could see and hear through oaken walls?"

NEVER WASH COMBS.

IF it can be avoided, never wash combs, as water often makes the teeth split, and the tortoiseshell or horn of which they are made, rough.

Small brushes, manufactured purposely for cleaning combs, may be purchased at a trifling cost; with this the comb should be well brushed, and afterward wiped with a cloth or towel.

LAMP WICKS

TO insure a good light wicks must be changed often, as they soon become clogged and do not permit the free passage of the oil.

Soaking wicks in vinegar twenty-four hours before placing in lamp insures a clear flame.

WHY THE FRENCH WOMAN SUCCEEDS IN BUSINESS

THE mother of a French family, even though her husband's income be two or three thousand a year, would think it worse than foolish to live up to it.

There are the dowries of the girls to be thought of, and the starting of the boys in professions or business.

Then, too, one never knows what misfortune may befall, and it is better to be prepared when you can. So says the wise Frenchwoman, and she generally practices what she preaches. But the virtue of economy is not confined to the mothers of families, or to those women well on in life.

The same trait is to be found in the gay butterflies one sees sunning themselves in bright raiment down the fashionable avenues of Paris.

They are by no means as care free as they look, and you may be sure they get good value for their money, however they spend it.

On another rung of the social ladder are those neat, bright-eyed, deft-fingered women who serve in the shops. They are never at a loss for a word in favor of their goods, and even if they do carry away the foreigner with a torrent of words and a persuasive smile, who shall blame them? They are there to sell, not to buy.

As is the shop girl, so is the clerk—punctual, polite, hard-working, and with a natural dignity that inspires her not to be personal in business matters. In her office she so far sinks her individuality as not to interfere with her work. Out of her office she is, probably, as "coy and hard to please" as the rest of her sex.

Such an attitude is, probably, the result of education; for no well brought-up French girl, whether she belongs to the haute societe or to the petite bourgeoisie, would dream of talking in any familiar way to the men with whom she was brought into contact.

Such women exemplify admirably the dignity of labor.

In fact, one will almost never come across the Frenchwoman who is ashamed of her position in life.

She is, indeed, rather given to wear an air of condescension or indifferent to those whose lot is not cast on something like the same lines. She may—probably she does—wish to be better off, but until she has the means to do it well she does not ape people of wealth and fashion, and therein shows her worldly wisdom.

It is a very notable point about middle-class French people that they never want to be thought better than they are, and have no false pride about little things.

They do not care one atom that Monsieur and Madame B—— keep two servants to their one; they think it no disgrace to be seen carrying a parcel, though one could wish they would not always use newspaper to wrap it in. And it is not often that a man's children are ashamed of his origin, however humble it may have been.

It is natural that, with such fine commercial qualities, the wives should prove invaluable to their husbands, and nine-tenths of the smaller business men make full use of them. The butcher's wife sits like a buxom sphinx behind the cash desk, keeping a sharp eye on master and men as they go about their business, as well as looking after her account books.

The baker's wife is a fine counter-weight to the light-hearted "goings-on" of the white-capped baker and the pretty girl who serves.

The tailor, the paperhanger, the shoemaker and the hairdresser all, in fact, rely upon the support of the woman who bears their name; and few of them, so long as they do their part, have cause to complain of inefficient help.

To be a really good wife, from a Frenchman's point of view, a woman should always be gay, always be well, always be capable, and always, without exception, have either money or its equivalent.

With such a standard to live up to it is not to be wondered at that Frenchwomen think seriously of their daughters' future, and do their best to insure them physical comforts at least.

Mother, Teach Your Son

TO be true to his word and work.

To respect religion for its own sake.

To face all difficulties with courage and cheerfulness.

To form no friendships that can bring him into degrading associations.

To respect other people's convictions.

To reverence womanhood.

To live a clean life in thought and word as well as in deed.

Teach him that true manliness always commands success.

That to command he must first learn to obey.

That there can be no compromise between honesty and dishonesty.

That the virtues of punctuality and politeness are excellent things to cultivate.

That a gentleman is just what the word implies—a man who is gentle in his dealings with the opinions, feelings and weaknesses of other people.

RED NOSE

This affliction is not an indication of drink. Digestive troubles will cause a red nose more quickly than will alcohol. We make it a rule to remove the cause at once, after which the nose loses its redness and soon becomes natural in appearance.

In those chronic cases where the nose is filled with tiny red veins showing on the surface we can in a short time drive them away and bring the nose to its normal size. Call or write for treatment.

CHAPTER XV.

The Tower Alarm

(Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

THE wind was moaning fitfully when Hagar opened the door. The red lamp was extinguished. Together they crossed the deserted road and cautiously entered the grounds of the big house.

The storm had spent itself for the time, but the fingers of the storm seemed to have written a threat across the sky, where drifts of cloud, dark and sombre, massed overhead, broken here and there by wan moonlight.

A little shiver ran through Olga. Just over the tower—the superstitious fancy came to her—did the clouds seem blackest, most threatening, as though over that house of apparent quiet hung some evil fate.

And as the thought was in her mind, Hagar pointed toward the sleeping house, and a gleam of moonlight caught the brightness of the key clasped in her hand.

"Your fortune lies in yon house, dearie—that which will enable you to begin a new life, a life filled full of happiness, aye, and of love! Money means power to buy everything, and my dearie isn't going to throw it all away for a scruple!"

An Awful Dream

Philip Haggard awoke suddenly, started up from his sleep, scared and trembling. The room was in darkness; it was still night. Perhaps it was only a few minutes ago since under the influence of that heavy sleeping draught he had fallen into heavy slumber.

He had dreamed that he had got out of bed and dressed and gone back to the tower, summoned against his will by some strange fascination, such as at times mesmerizes murderers.

And he had taken from under his pillow the key of the lock that guarded the tower door, had stolen down the corridor and into the room where he had hidden the dead man, under the influence of this horrible spell.

Somehow he had known what it was the dead man wanted; he had fought in his dream against the impulse to obey; but something had resistlessly drawn him against his will to fit those ten brass thimbles upon the dead man's fingers—those thimbles so cunningly poised that the slightest stirring or returning life in the fingers would send their message along the quivering strings to the alarm bell above.

A Terrible Reality

How vivid a thing a dream can be! Philip Haggard remembered now with a shudder how in his dream he had placed the lifeless body on the wooden trestles, and fitted the thimbles, one by one, one by one, to the thumbs and the fingers.

It had only been a dream, though the horror of it lingered in his waking moments—for he was in bed in his own room, and the key of the lock was still under his pillow. He felt under his pillow to make his conviction sure. Yes, it was there and—

What was that? Why were there two keys under his pillow? The key of the tower and that of his bedroom door. But he distinctly remembered that after turning the key in the door of his bedroom, he had not removed it; his brain was so clear on that point that it was impossible to have made a mistake. He had gone to sleep leaving the key in the lock; now it was under his pillow.

A thought made him strike a match with trembling fingers. His clothes were not where he had left them on going to bed.

The match burned down to his fingers as he stared at them, but he scarcely felt the pain. A thought was clamoring in his brain; it had not been merely a dream—he must have acted his dream!

Must have dreamed and gone to the tower, key in hand—he must have actually in his sleep placed the lifeless body on those wooden trestles, have fastened those caps on the dead fingers.

He had to set his teeth to prevent himself crying out in the swift horror of that realized fact. He lay down in bed again and pulled the bedclothes over his ears, cowering with terror.

And just then a sound cut, sharp and clear, through the silence of the night. A sound from the tower.

It was the faint striking of the alarm bell connected with those ten brass thimbles.

He came down to breakfast the next morning looking so worn and ill that his man servant West was surprised out of his usual well-trained impassiveness of feature into a stare. Haggard's face betrayed the signs of the terrible mental strain of the past night; there were dark rims under his eyes, his cheeks were colorless.

"Why do you stare at me, West?" he demanded, turning angrily on the man.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said West, taken aback by this sudden irritable outburst, "but I was afraid you might be ill. You don't look at all well, if I may say so, this morning, sir."

"I am quite well," answered Haggard, curtly, already repenting his speech. "That is, I had rather a wakeful night. The wind disturbed me."

"Shall you wait breakfast for Miss Haggard, sir?" asked West.

"Miss Haggard?" echoed his master in puzzled tones.

For the moment the unfamiliar words left him at a loss; his mind seemed strangely slow and confused after its long strain. He remembered in time to avert an awkward pause; of course West referred to the woman who had come last night with the storm, whom he had been forced to introduce as his sister.

"No," he went on, hastily. "I have to be at the office early this morning. You see, with Mr. Wynter leaving New York to-day"—it was an effort to speak the words naturally, yet he managed not to stammer—"a double responsibility is thrown upon my shoulders. And Miss Haggard will be tired after her journey; I expect she will not wish to rise early to-day. I'll have breakfast at once."

He walked across to the open window and looked out at the sunny morning. He was oppressed with an insistent sense of unreality. Everything was going on in its usual calm routine, as though the tremendous drama that had been played within these walls but a few hours ago had only been the fragment of a dream.

At least no suspicion of what had occurred was aroused so far among those of his household, Haggard decided.

PIANO SLAUGHTER

STORAGE SALE

A GREAT many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Sale. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best of homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second-hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage sale, the price is simply put on; first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact, more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Several nice upright pianos which must be sold at a sacrifice; 2 nice uprights, Chickering and Vose, $40 and $50; nearly new mahogany uprights, 3 pedals, latest style, at ½ Boston prices; reason why, no large rents, big salaries or commissions to be paid; no fancy floors; our expenses about $5 a day; Boston warerooms' expense $300 to $500 daily; our terms the most liberal; free carting, free tuning and 3 months' lessons with each piano; why not see us at once and thus save the agents' enormous profits? SHAWMUT PIANO CO., 720A Shawmut av., Roxbury, Mass.; open till 9 P. M.

PIANOS PIANOS PIANOS

Why don't you go to the J. B. COOK PIANO CO., and enquire about their arrangements for selling you a fine, high grade piano at a saving of $100 to $150 to you. A square deal for every customer of this concern. You can't afford not to look over our extensive line of fine pianos and learn our prices. Easy terms, but the cash speaks loudest. Call or write for information.

Gas Trust Will Not Like Gen. Schaff's Logic

But Nothing That Could Have Been Said on Beacon Hill Would Have Shown Up the Trust-Babson Scheme Better

Before the Committee on Public Lighting, Wednesday, was held a hearing on a bill to adopt a "sliding scale" for gas prices in Massachusetts, especially in Boston.

It is a bill purporting to make greater inducements to the Gas Trust to improve its facilities and cheapen gas. Its endorsers cleverly claim that it will have a tendency "to take the question out of the field of debate for ten years," which means that it WOULD STOP ALL PROTEST ON THE PART OF THE PEOPLE FOR THAT LENGTH OF TIME.

It is a shrewd bill. The Gas Trust first thought of the idea during the successful fight that the BOSTON AMERICAN made for cheaper gas for Boston, a fight that caused the Trust much inconvenience. Then it received the endorsement of Corporation Counsel Babson of Boston. Since then others have been secured to approve it.

General Morris Schaff is a member of the Massachusetts Gas Commission. More than that, he is universally recognized as an honest member. And no one has ever accused him of being that bugaboo of captains of finance—"a radical."

General Schaff appeared before the committee Wednesday and told its members what the scheme means. He showed them how it is a plan to secure an additional dividend on the heavily watered stocks of the Massachusetts Gas Companies. He made it clear that those who favor the scheme are either working for ulterior ends or have been "lured into approval by the siren song of the promoters," as he put it.

But the most interesting thing that the General said, and one of the most logical, as well, was his reply to the claim that gas in England, under the sliding scale, is cheaper than in this country.

He showed that the sliding scale has not reduced the price as much there as the present law has in Massachusetts, and assured the committee that gas would be cheaper fifteen years from now if things are left as they are than if the proposed bill is passed. And he absolutely exploded the arguments of the Trust and its friends when he said:

"They say the price is cheaper in cities of England where the sliding scale is used than here. But they do not show that it is no cheaper in English cities that have the scale than in English cities that do not have it. IF ENGLISH CONDITIONS ARE TO BE TAKEN AS A BASIS THEY MUST GO FARTHER, FOR THE CITIES WHERE THE PRICE IS LOWEST ARE THOSE PLACES IN ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND WHICH OWN THEIR OWN GAS PLANTS."

General Schaff has never appeared as one favoring municipal ownership. His statement, therefore, is not the argument of one convinced that cities should own and operate their own public utilities. For just this reason, his logic is all the stronger; all the more impossible to combat.

How the Hundred-Time Millionaire Is Made

A Simple Process—Just "Add Water and Serve"

Did you ever know much about the origin and growth of the enormous American fortunes that bring up our hundred-time millionaires like mushrooms and MILK THE PEOPLE OF THEIR SAVINGS PERMANENTLY TO KEEP THE MUSHROOMS GOING?

Here is a short story, easily understood:

A short time ago, in Salem, Ohio, a little wire nail company was started. The capital was one hundred thousand dollars. AND ALL THE CASH PUT IN WAS SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS.

It made money.

Along came a man with a Trust idea and said to the owners of this little Salem company: "We will buy you out. Through combination and increasing prices we can make more than you can."

The little wire nail company which had only seventy-five thousand dollars in it was then sold, via watered stock, for ONE MILLION TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

That was only the beginning. The Hon. Mr. Gates came along with another splendid idea. He knew that one million two hundred thousand dollars called for too little interest from American users of nails.

He took up this little Salem nail company, mixed in a few other ingredients and THEN ISSUED STOCK AMOUNTING TO TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS. He "just added water."

But THAT was too modest, still. So the American Steel & Wire Company was organized a second time—and this time with a capitalization of NINETY millions of dollars.

There, you see, an arrangement was made for the American people using nails to pay interest to the holders of watered stock which had been swollen from practically nothing to NINETY MILLIONS.

That was the status of affairs when the present United States Steel Trust was formed in J. P. Morgan's office.

This concern took over the American Steel & Wire Company from Mr. Gates and his friends. They had swollen it up to ninety millions, which was pretty high, but that wasn't quite high enough.

MR. MORGAN ADDED SOME MORE MILLIONS AND DUMPED THE THING INTO HIS GREAT STEEL TRUST.

In the formation of that final gigantic trust, in the swelling up of a little seventy-five-thousand-dollar business into unlimited millions, ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE MADE ENORMOUS FORTUNES.

There was one little man living in an Ohio village—the poor creature is insane now—who happened to hold a little stock, which was suddenly watered up until he had a million dollars. He had been working on about forty dollars per week. He didn't know how to spend his money, so he got into the habit of sending for his favorite barber to come from Cleveland to his little village—a matter of a hundred miles or so—to shave him.

THE MAN PAYING RENT FOR A MODERN BUILDING, THE CONTRACTOR PUTTING UP A MODERN BUILDING, IS PAYING FOR THAT PECULIAR SHAVE.

There are a great many other kinds of "shaves" being paid for throughout this country.

Either through low wages, high rents, or high prices for materials, SOMEBODY has got to pay the interest on all these hundreds of millions of inflated stocks.

Mr. Carnegie, as you know, offered his entire steel business on option for ONE hundred millions. The deal did not go through—and right after that he sold out to Morgan's Steel Trust for THREE hundred millions. Morgan just added two hundred millions of water to Carnegie's original price—and the people of this country have got to pay to Carnegie, yearly, fifteen millions—which is five per cent. a year on three hundred millions of bonds—before they begin to pay what the steel costs.

We rather look down on the countries that pay a few hundreds of thousands yearly to a hereditary ruler. But how about this country, which is paying tens of millions each year ALREADY to hereditary owners of railroads, Trusts, etc., and which will go on paying out tens and hundreds of millions annually to the heirs of those who, in this Trust-birth time, "just add water and serve" the people so nicely?

Carnegie was cunning. Morgan did not care much, as long as he floated his "scheme"—and the people must pay TO ONE MAN ALONE, AND TO HIS HEIRS FOREVER, FIFTEEN MILLIONS YEARLY ON PART OF ONE INDUSTRY.

Morgan added to the Carnegie bonds, etc., ONE THOUSAND MILLIONS of manufactured Steel stock. But that was not even water—it was just air. Still the people must pay interest on it.

THEIR SWELL FRIEND TURNS OUT TO BE A WALKING ADVERTISEMENT

THERE IS NOTHING SLOW ABOUT SAN FRANCISCO

The pluck and unconquerable energy of the men of California had striking illustration in yesterday's San Francisco Examiner. Only nine days had elapsed since the paper's office and plant vanished in the common ruin. Yet yesterday the Examiner published a sixteen-page edition, containing SEVENTY COLUMNS of advertisements, and was obliged to refuse twenty-eight columns more.

The question is not will San Francisco rebuild, but how soon?

People with the courage and vigor and resolution of those on that Pacific peninsula will give the world an object lesson in the rapidity with which a community of cheerful and stout-hearted Americans can recover from misfortune.

Within a few months, not years, San Francisco will be herself again.

HOME, NOW.

MEIN LIEBER SON, LOOEY—I haf receifed your letter from Worcester und your mother und I vas glat dot you vas vell, und dot pitzness vas goot on der road vare you vas drummerizing in der capacity of a commercial trafeller.

Dis reminds me, Looey, dot a young lady in Worcester wrote me a letter some time not long ago recently in vich she vishes some advice, because der idea seems to be rushing abroad dot I vas getting to be a regular olt Dr. Dinky, mit sure cures up each sleeve und cheap but goot advice in my cold storage.

I enclose you der letter, Looey, vich is as following:

> Worcester, Mass.
> Dear Mr. Dinkelspiel—My hair is dark brown, with Titian tints. I have been using peroxide in order to make it light. A friend says it affects the brain, and the outcome of it is that one gets insane. Now I am worried about it. Please advise me. ERMYNTRUDE.

I vish you vould tell Ermyntrude, mit my compliments, Loey, dot to haf Titian tints in der hair vas eggstremely careless.

She should cofer it at night mit powdered champor, und breathe only mit der mouth closed.

Dis is a sure cure for moths, centipedes, sefenteen-year locusts und udder dings like vot she mentions.

Tell her, Looey, dot in order to awoid dese dings in der future I vould advise her to drive a nail in der vall abould four feet from der floor.

Den ven she und her disposition vas retiring at night all she has to do is to hang her hair on der nail.

Den she should chently seize der left sleeve of her pajamesey chacket und laugh in it vunce like dis—ha, ha!

Dis style of laughter is used because she has fooled der moths und locusts und Titian tints py hanging her hair on a nail.

You should tell her also, Looey, dot it vas quite a clefer trick to make der hair light mit peroxenhide of hydrograph mitould making der brain light at der same time.

In der medical books Ermyntrude vill find dot dare is alvays a nerve running from der hair direct to der brain.

Dis is caused by der fact dot it is mostly hair-brained peoples dot use peroxenhide of hydrograph.

Der safest vay is to put der peroxenhide in der hair just before sleeping, den hire a night vatchman to keep it avay from der brain.

But tell her not to vorry, Looey. Peroxenhide may make her light-headed, but it vill not gif her butterflies in der attic.

Peroxenhide may cause der young lady to haf lights on her roof garten, but it vill nefer make her roach house.

It vas certainly too bad dot Nature vas color blind ven it designed dis lady's hair, und much sympathy should be eggspressed to her.

But I vas not in der eggspress pitzness.

Yours, mit luff,
D. DINKELSPIEL.

Little Editorials from the People

A Suggestion for Rebuilding San Francisco.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In the matter of rebuilding the city of San Francisco, it will be a great problem for the engineers and architects to solve to make the buildings safe, at least against slight earthquakes. Though not an engineer, and not understanding much about building, I desire to make the following suggestions: That all buildings (especially within city limits) be [illegible]structed of steel and cement, and their height to be governed by the area their base covers. Also that the entire surface of the city shall be covered by large iron or steel girders, practically connecting all buildings as one, and forming foundations for the streets. There should be a system of water pipes on the tops of the buildings, which in the event of a severe earthquake would break and doubtless prevent spread of fire.

The objection, of course, to such safeguarding would be the enormous expense, but nevetheless, to my mind, something of this kind seems essential for the future prosperity of San Francisco.
